

The Center for Global Peace and Conflict Studies

Presents

The 21st Annual Margolis Lecture

Co-sponsored with
African American Studies Program, UCI School of Law, Center for the Study of Democracy,
Department of Anthropology, and the International Studies Public Forum

“After Nuremberg: The Historical Significance of the South African Transition”

Mahmood Mamdani

Professor of Government and Anthropology, Columbia University
Director, Makerere Institute of Social Research, Kampala, Uganda
Foreign Policy and Prospect Magazine “Top 20 Public Intellectual”

Abstract

Professor Mamdani’s Margolis Lecture focuses on the question of how best to respond to extreme violence that has characterized African civil wars. A comparative discussion of Nuremberg trials and the negotiations that led to the post-apartheid transition in South Africa provides a basis for contrasting justice as criminal and justice as political.

Friday, November 15, 2013
Humanities Instructional Building (HIB), Room 100
3:30 to 5:00p.m.